

Judge Elbert H. Gary of the U. S. Steel Corporation photographed in Washington. He came here to attend a conference with government officials on the price of steel. Judge Gary is acting as chairman of about twenty steel producers.

A new photograph of Marshal Foch, commander of the victorious allied armies. Marshal Foch plans to come to America early in the summer—probably in June—and he will be a guest of Georgetown University, from which institution he will receive a degree.

Viscountess Guinslow, in charge of the British Women's Society at Brest, France, where she is known as "The Mother of the Heroic Yanks." The society entertains and feeds dainties to our boys who are en route home.

A scene in Weimar, where the German republic was born. Col. Reinhardt (in foreground at right) and Gen. Maerker (at left) inspecting the guard of honor at the Theater Weimar while the constituent assembly was in session.

Capt. Selby J. Day and Capt. Clifford S. Wheeler, who fought with Czechoslovak troops in Siberia for six months, now detailed to Prague as aids to Gen. Stefanie, Czech minister of war. They enlisted in the naval reserve in October, 1918, but were allowed to transfer to the Czech army.

Mrs. Henry O'Bannon Cooper of Alexandria, wife of the general attorney for the Southern railway system, who christened the destroyer O'Bannon at San Francisco on February 28.

The United States Council of National Defense emergency employment committee for soldiers and sailors. Seated, left to right: Mathew Woll, American Federation of Labor; Elliot Goodwin, general secretary Chamber of Commerce; S. P. Bush, industrial board of Department of Commerce; Edward N. Hurley, shipping board; Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of committee; Grosvenor B. Clarkson, director of Council of National Defense; Franklin D. Roosevelt, acting Secretary of Navy; Nathan A. Smyth, assistant director general U. S. employment service, and E. J. Ayers, Interior Department. Standing: Assistant Secretary Christie, Department of Agriculture; D. M. Reynolds, assistant to director; E. H. Greenwood, secretary to committee; B. S. Cutler, chief of bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, and Dr. R. F. McElwee.

Lucien Donchet, a French boy captured by the Huns and released when the Yanks made their great victory drive. He has been adopted by Capt. Carl B. Wachs of Covington, Ky., and arrived in this country wearing the Yank uniform, a full-fledged American.